United States Senator Allee Commends Richardson & Robbins' Boned Meats

In a speech before the Agricultural Committee of the United States Senate, I. Frank Allee, the able Senator from Delaware, said:

"I am especially proud of the Richardson & Robbins Company of my home town, in whose packing house I as a boy worked under the immediate supervision of the founder, Alden B. Richardson. There the greatest care was taken to give the public only the best material, handled in the cleanest and best manner. I can assure you that I have visited this factory several times each year since then, and I find they have never relaxed in the slightest degree their supervision and care for cleanliness nor lessened their purpose and desire to give the consumer the best of everything. The policy adopted then and pursued ever since has caused the business to grow to enormous proportions."

Richardson & Robbins' potted chicken, turkey, ham, tongue and tinned luncheon meats have had a place on the finest tables in New England for three generations. Their good will is something that money cannot

Every step in the production of Richardson & Robbins tinned meats is under the direct personal supervision of the firm-Every nook and corner of the plant is open to the public, and as clean as a new pin. Every meat is tinned in a special sanitary can that opens with a key. Every can is sterilized.

Ask your dealer for Richardson & Robbins' potted chicken, turkey, ham, tongue, curried fowl, boned chicken and luncheon meats. Insist on the label "R. & R." It is your safeguard. Ask anybody from Delaware.
